

Press Release

Microsoft and Visibility.biz announce MVP Award for Mr. David A. Edson, M.Arch.

Microsoft Corp. recognizes David Edson as the MVP Award recipient for 2006 and 2007 for years of service in advancing the adoption and usage of Visio and Visio Technology

Eagan, MN, July 18, 2007: Microsoft Corporation (Redmond, WA) has awarded Mr. David A. Edson, M.Arch., Director of Consulting Services for Visibility.biz with the highest honor awarded Microsoft Partners, the Most Valued Professional (MVP) Award. This award is in recognition of his outstanding commitment and support to Microsoft technical communities worldwide. Microsoft states that, as a company, they are impressed by Mr. Edson's technical skills and by his willingness to share his knowledge with his peers. Mr. Edson has shown an excellent commitment to assist other users of Microsoft products.

As a recipient of this year's Most Valued Professional award, Mr. Edson joins a network of amazing people in online and offline technical communities around the world who share their expertise and enthusiasm for Microsoft products and technologies. Microsoft salutes its MVP's for demonstrating the spirit of community and inspiring people every day to have an impact through technology. To learn more about the MVP Program, visit: www.microsoft.com/mvp.

This award not only shows Mr. Edson's commitment to Visio technology, but moreover provides additional evidence of Mr. Edson's ability to assist the entire Microsoft Visio Sales, Marketing, Development and User communities in driving the purchase and adoption of Visio as the mission-critical tool of choice for visualizing business data and processes. Please join Microsoft and Visibility.biz in congratulating Mr. Edson on this well deserved accolade.